BOYS AND FROGS

One day four boys were playing near a pond. They saw some frogs jumping in and out of the water. Their eyes shone with mischief. 'Here is a fine game,' they thought, looking at the frogs. "Let's see who can hit the most number of frogs," cried one. The boys picked up some stones and started throwing them at the frogs. "got one!" cried a boy excitedly. "Me too" cried another. The boys crowded around one hurt frog, poking it with their fingers. Then the game started all over again. The boys cheered and clapped. Suddenly, an old frog poked his head out of the water. "Boys," he said, "Please stop throwing stones at us. What is fun for you means pain and death for us."

The boys were surprised to hear the frog speak. They stopped throwing stones. before they could say anything, the old frog spoke again, "Would you like it if somebody threw stones at you? Think about it. It is good to be considerate.
